

Victim Outcome Survey

We recognize and are frustrated ourselves that the criminal justice system moves slowly. In addition, the law does not generally allow us or the courts to punish or reform defendants in the ways we would like due to budget and other legal restrictions. The system also usually values the rights of defendants more than it does the rights of victims. Most importantly, our focus in doing justice has to be on what we can prove with evidence to unanimously convict a person before a jury. Many times we suspect or even know something but do not have the evidence from the police investigation to prove it. Sometimes we have evidence the law doesn't allow us to use. With those things said and with those limitations, we have dedicated our professional lives to do the very best job we can to do justice and help victims. Your feedback will help us continue our services and correct any errors.
